Oct. 27, 2015 Update:

EPA added a document relating to a community meeting in Silverton, CO.

Background: On Sept. 4, 2015, EPA Assistant Administrator Mathy Stanislaus, EPA Region 8 Administrator Shaun McGrath and officials from EPA's Region 8 office met with local officials and community members from San Juan County, La Plata County, Silverton, Durango and the Southern Ute Tribe. Meeting participants discussed long-term options for addressing mining-related impacts to water quality in the Animas River Watershed, including the possibility of designating the area as a Superfund National Priorities List (NPL) site. EPA developed a document after the meeting to provide follow-up information on a number of stakeholder questions. View Q&A's here.

For additional information on the Superfund cleanup process, visit the EPA's Superfund site. (<http://www2.epa.gov/superfund/superfund-cleanup-process>). Information on Superfund NPL is available here (<http://www2.epa.gov/superfund/superfund-national-priorities-list-npl>). And EPA Assistant Administrator Mathy Stanislaus discussed the Superfund NPL listing process in an Oct. 2, 2015 blog post, "Explaining How We Address Contaminated Sites."
